Databases A-Z

Databases A-Z lists all the databases the Bodleian Libraries subscribes to.

Finding a specific database when you know its title

By default, databases are arranged alphabetically. If you know the name of the database you would like to use, you can find it in two ways:

 Select from the top of the page the letter that the database starts with. For instance, if I was looking for the database Web of Science, I would click 'W' to narrow down the results.

2. Search for the database title in the search box.

Browsing databases in your subject area

If you are not sure which databases are useful for your subject area, you can browse by subject. To do this, in the 'All subjects' drop-down menu, select your subject area.

Narrowing down databases by type

There are databases that provide different types of resources including images and maps. Unless you are researching these, it is recommended that you select the database type 'Abstracts/indexes'. This will show you databases that have resources like articles and bibliographic indexes.
